Honoring a Beloved ZBT Housemother

New fund to support student research in Jewish Studies

As housemother for 22 years, Elsie Kaplan Shapiro helped feed, nurse, counsel and encourage hundreds of fraternity brothers at Zeta Beta Tau. Known as “Mother Shapiro,” her influence continued to make a difference long after her students graduated.

Thanks to the generosity of fraternity brothers, her family and friends, a new fund established in Shapiro’s memory will ensure that future students continue to benefit from her generous spirit and remarkable dedication. The Elsie Kaplan “Mother” Shapiro ZBT Undergraduate Research and Travel Fund in Jewish Studies will provide awards to undergraduates working on projects in Jewish Studies.

Leading the fund-raising efforts was her grandson, David Shapiro, ’97. After his grandmother passed away in December 2007, he wrote to his fraternity brothers, “It was always a dream of mine that all her boys would be able to raise money so her name and spirit would live forever at Chapel Hill.”

“My family and I, along with the ZBT brothers, are thrilled to give this gift to the Jewish Studies program,” said David after funding was in place. “My grandmother’s love of traveling, Judaism, and Chapel Hill made this gift a perfect way to honor her memory. We hope that future undergraduates will be able to use this money to learn and experience something that will impact their lives as my grandmother impacted the lives of so many undergraduates before them.”

“Faculty members teaching at Carolina are privileged to work with such wonderful undergraduates. Now, thanks to the generosity of the Shapiro family and generations of ZBT brothers, we’ll be able to actively support student research in Jewish Studies,” added Jonathan Hess, director of the Center. “We couldn’t be more excited—or more grateful—for the opportunity to carry on Elsie Kaplan Shapiro’s legacy in this way.”

Additional donations to the endowment fund are welcome. For more information, please contact Rob Parker at the Arts and Sciences Foundation at (919) 962-6182 or at Rob.Parker@unc.edu.
from the director’s desk

The start of an exciting academic year

Last spring marked the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies’s fifth anniversary. Let me thank all of you who joined us for Christopher Browning’s fascinating lecture on survivor testimony and the special reception that followed.

In this issue of News from the Center, we continue to share our excitement about the Center as we move forward into our next five years. Three new Jewish Studies professors are starting their careers at Carolina this fall, and in the coming academic year we’ll be launching national searches for two more faculty members. For the first time in the history of the university, Carolina undergraduates this year can choose between a two-year sequence in Biblical Hebrew and a three-year sequence in Modern Hebrew, and this fall we’re offering 10 other Jewish Studies courses in departments across the College.

We’ve also revamped our public events programming. We are now offering a full menu of community lectures, academic lectures and continuing education seminars. Our community lectures are moving to a new venue that will offer better parking and easier access for the large numbers of people from outside the university who’ve been regularly coming to our events.

Without the generosity of Carolina alumni and friends of the Center, none of this would be possible. Your investments in the future of Jewish Studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are already yielding tremendous returns. I hope you share our sense of pride in what we’ve accomplished over the last five years and what we have planned for the future!

Dr. Jonathan M. Hess
Director, Carolina Center for Jewish Studies
Moses M. and Hannah L. Malkin Distinguished Term Professor of Jewish History and Culture
Professor, Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures jmhess@email.unc.edu
(919) 843-9160

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Languages and Literatures as an assistant professor of early modern German Studies (1500-1750). Previously she was at the Humboldt University in Berlin, Germany. She is currently writing a book on the relationship between German and Yiddish literature in early modern Europe.

The number of Jewish Studies faculty members has doubled since 2003, which has allowed Carolina to greatly expand course offerings for its undergraduates. In the 2008-09 academic year, 12 faculty members, based in seven different academic departments, will teach and conduct research in Jewish Studies at Carolina, and funding is in place for three more faculty positions. As the faculty continues to grow, the Center will offer exciting new courses, reach more students and eventually create a truly comprehensive undergraduate program, complete with a B.A. in Jewish Studies.

news briefs

NEW WEB SITE
The Center has recently revamped its Web site. Please visit us at ccjs.unc.edu.

THE DEAD SEA SCROLLS IN RALEIGH
The North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences in Raleigh is displaying Dead Sea Scrolls artifacts through December 28. Two of Carolina’s faculty members will speak as part of the exhibit’s lecture series. Jodi Magness will lecture about The Archaeology of Qumran and the Dead Sea Scrolls on Thursday, October 30 and Bart Ehrman will speak about The Dead Sea Scrolls and Early Christianity on Wednesday, December 10. For information and to purchase tickets for the exhibit or the lectures, visit the museum’s Web site at www.naturalsciences.org.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION
On April 14, the Center marked its fifth anniversary with a public lecture given by faculty member Christopher Browning [shown above]. Advisory Board Chairman, Eli N. Evans, ’58, delivered the opening remarks. Following the lecture, guests enjoyed a special reception to help celebrate the Center’s achievements.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Languages and Literatures as an assistant professor of early modern German Studies (1500-1750). Previously she was at the Humboldt University in Berlin, Germany. She is currently writing a book on the relationship between German and Yiddish literature in early modern Europe.

The number of Jewish Studies faculty members has doubled since 2003, which has allowed Carolina to greatly expand course offerings for its undergraduates. In the 2008-09 academic year, 12 faculty members, based in seven different academic departments, will teach and conduct research in Jewish Studies at Carolina, and funding is in place for three more faculty positions. As the faculty continues to grow, the Center will offer exciting new courses, reach more students and eventually create a truly comprehensive undergraduate program, complete with a B.A. in Jewish Studies.

NEW WEB SITE
The Center has recently revamped its Web site. Please visit us at ccjs.unc.edu.

THE DEAD SEA SCROLLS IN RALEIGH
The North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences in Raleigh is displaying Dead Sea Scrolls artifacts through December 28. Two of Carolina’s faculty members will speak as part of the exhibit’s lecture series. Jodi Magness will lecture about The Archaeology of Qumran and the Dead Sea Scrolls on Thursday, October 30 and Bart Ehrman will speak about The Dead Sea Scrolls and Early Christianity on Wednesday, December 10. For information and to purchase tickets for the exhibit or the lectures, visit the museum’s Web site at www.naturalsciences.org.
community events

Rediscovering the Dance of Klezmer Music
Monday, October 27, 2008, 7:30 p.m.
William and Ida Friday Center for Continuing Education

Klezmer Trio Concert
Tuesday, October 28, 2008, 7:30 p.m., Gerrard Hall

WALTER ZEV FELDMAN, a leading Klezmer researcher and performer, will lecture on Monday, October 27 and perform in a Klezmer Trio concert with Christina Crowder and Alexander Fiterstein on Tuesday, October 28. These events are made possible by a grant from the Charles H. Revson Foundation in honor of Eli N. Evans, ’58.

Communal Genocide: Personal Accounts of the Destruction of Buczacz, Eastern Galicia, 1941-44
Eli N. Evans Distinguished Lecture in Jewish Studies
Monday, November 17, 2008, 7:30 p.m., William and Ida Friday Center for Continuing Education

OMER BARTOV, the John P. Birkelund Distinguished Professor of European History at Brown University and one of the world’s foremost experts on the Holocaust, will explore how genocide unfolded in a town that had a mixed Jewish-Polish-Ukrainian population for centuries.

the 2008 Uhlman family seminar

Witnessing and Memory: What is Gained, What is Lost, and What Remains from Holocaust Testimonies
Tuesday, November 11 and Wednesday, November 12, 2008.

This two-day seminar will interrogate the idea of witnessing and what we can gain from such testimonies in regard to writing history, understanding the past and coming to terms with that past. For seminar details and fees, or to register, visit: www.unc.edu/depts/human.

This seminar is offered by the Program in Humanities and Human Values. It is made possible by a grant from the Uhlman Family Fund with additional support from the Center for European Studies.

academic lectures

New Light on the Period of the Maccabees: The Excavations at Tel Kedesh
Kaplan-Brauer Lecture on the Contribution of Judaism to Civilization
Monday, September 22, 2008, 5:30 p.m., Toy Lounge

ANDREA M. BERLIN, University of Minnesota

Pleasures Among the Jews in 18th-Century Europe and Their Meaning
The Morris, Ida and Alan Heilig Lectureship in Jewish Studies
Monday, February 9, 2009, 5:30 p.m., Hyde Hall

SHMUEL FEINER, Bar Ilan University, Israel

Edward Said in Jerusalem: Exile, Criticism, and Global Culture
Monday, March 2, 2009, 5:30 p.m., Hyde Hall

AAMIR MUFTI, UCLA

This lecture is made possible by a grant from the Charles H. Revson Foundation in honor of Eli N. Evans, ’58.

Lunchtime Seminars: all three professors will also conduct seminars regarding their recent books on the day of their academic lectures. Reservations are required for the lunchtime seminars. Please call or email for details and to R.S.V.P.
As a Senior Associate Dean in the College of Arts and Sciences, I have been impressed by the exciting growth and development of the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies. Now, as Interim Dean replacing Holden Thorp with his appointment to Chancellor, I am delighted to have this opportunity to thank you for your support and to encourage you to remain involved.

With your help, the Center’s academic and outreach programs are thriving. More than 1,000 students are enrolled annually in Jewish Studies courses here. Three new faculty colleagues have arrived on campus this fall (joining nine already here), and our lecture programs are reaching more faculty, students and members of the public than ever before.

Now our students and colleagues in Chapel Hill and our friends across North Carolina have many opportunities to learn about the diverse worlds of Jewish history and culture.

The outstanding research, classes and public programs developed by Jonathan Hess and our Jewish Studies faculty would not have been possible without the generous support of alumni and friends like you. We are most grateful to all of you who have made gifts to support the Center’s vital mission.

I hope you will renew your support by using the enclosed envelope. If you have questions about how to use appreciated securities to support the Center or if you need information on how to set up an endowment, please contact Rob Parker at the Arts and Sciences Foundation, (919) 962-6182, Rob.Parker@unc.edu.

Many thanks again for supporting the Carolina Center for Jewish Studies.

With best wishes,

Bruce W. Carney
Interim Dean, College of Arts and Sciences and Samuel Barron Distinguished Professor of Physics and Astronomy